MANAGER COMMENTARY

The model delivered a positive return in November and is in positive territory year to date. Both the UK and overseas components were positive contributors to returns but Overseas was by far the stronger.

There was a bit of activity in the underlying Blenheim funds which you can read about in the Blenheim factsheets.

This year was always going to be interesting from a political perspective with over half of the global population voting in general elections, but not many people would have expected so much off-ballot action. French politics has reached a crisis point. Currently we have an underweight to France, but we continue to follow the evolving situation given France's importance to Europe both financially and politically.

In December each year investors hope for a phenomenon known as a Santa Rally whereby positive momentum builds in investment markets as we approach Christmas. Theories seeking to explain the moves vary from workers investing bonuses to investors simply feeling seasonally optimistic. To put some figures to the theory, over the past 50 years the S&P 500 has been positive in December 78% of the time compared to 59% when we consider all months. Hopefully we will see a Santa Rally but as always, focus should be on longer term performance as short-term moves can be unpredictable.
